N.E.T. Aims to Grow Engagement and Increase Impact on MetroHealth

For the past four years, the members of MetroHealth N.E.T. have been promoting the initiatives of The MetroHealth System.

One of MetroHealth N.E.T.'s ("Now, Every day, Tomorrow") first members, Lauren Nadaud, is currently serving a one-year term as chair.

"It has been a truly fulfilling experience as it has enabled me to meet so many wonderful people and see all of the good that MetroHealth does in the greater Cleveland area," says Nadaud, a finance manager at Cleveland Clinic.

Born and raised in Cleveland, she lived in Chicago and New York for several years before moving back here with her husband.

N.E.T.'s vice chair is Nick VanDemark, communications manager at LifeBanc. Aware of his desire to get more involved in the community, Nadaud in early 2015 recruited VanDemark, whom she met while both were students at Miami University in Ohio, for MetroHealth N.E.T.

"I've always felt it is important to be an active member of any community in which you live and I believe in the mission of MetroHealth," says VanDemark, who will succeed Nadaud as chair at the end of the year.

VanDemark sees 2017 as a time for N.E.T. to expand and strengthen its impact.

"It's very important that those who may be better off financially know the impact MetroHealth has on our community and how that impact will not only improve patients' lives, but improve the lives of everyone who lives here," he says.

Today, MetroHealth N.E.T. members come together for events throughout the year. In May the group held its annual spring Kick-Off mixer at Masthead Brewing Company in downtown Cleveland.

Past events include:

- A Cleveland Browns tailgate at Market Garden Brewery
- A Trivia Night at Jukebox, a music-centric tavern
- The "60 Minutes ... 10 Questions" conversation series that launched in Fall 2016, which brings together N.E.T. members with leaders at MetroHealth and in the community.
- The annual N.E.T. Holiday Party. In December, members celebrate the work of the MetroHealth programs for which they raised funds during the year.

The group's funding and support priorities for 2017 are:

- Arts in Medicine – The mission of Arts in Medicine is to embed visual, performing and therapeutic arts throughout MetroHealth as a way to promote healing and wellness. Through their programs and services, Arts in Medicine also engages patients, families, caregivers and the greater community.
- Office of Opioid Safety – The first of its kind in Northeast Ohio, the Office of Opioid Safety is scheduled to open July 1. MetroHealth created the office to focus on education, advocacy and treatment. It will help health care providers connect with patients at risk of addiction; find more ways for patients to get the recovery services they need; and analyze data to spot trends that will help create new policies and practices to prevent and treat addiction.
- Simulation Center – Since late 2012, the MetroHealth Simulation Center (SIM Center) has been an interdisciplinary training facility that provides innovative education and training through various types of technical and human simulation programs. The SIM Center serves MetroHealth staff and trainees as well as numerous regional health care programs and professionals.

Raising the N.E.T.s Volleyball Tournament, in its fourth year, is MetroHealth N.E.T.'s main fundraising event. The 2016 tournament drew more than 130 players on 17 teams and raised more than $6,000.

Chester Endowment Gifts Help to Launch Medical, Scientific Careers

For more than 35 years, high achieving college students have competed for the chance to spend the summer at MetroHealth. Over the course of 10 weeks, they work on research projects in clinical laboratory research settings as part of the Edward M. Chester, MD, Summer Scholars Program.

This year the Chester Scholars Program attracted 83 applications for 15 spots. When they're not spending time on their own projects, students are given near free rein to explore all of the clinical areas of the hospital, including inpatient and outpatient areas, operating rooms and the emergency department.

Financial support for the Chester Scholars Program comes from the Chester Endowment, established in 1981 in lieu of creating an endowed chair. It covers administrative costs and a $2,500 stipend for each scholar.

The program draws from the area's top students interested in careers in medical research or academic medicine, says John Moore, MD, Division Head, Neonatology and program director since 1989.

"We're providing a program in honor of one of our cherished alumni," he says. Dr. Chester, an inductee into the inaugural class of the MetroHealth Medical Hall of Honor, died in 2013.

Because Dr. Chester wanted to strengthen opportunities in the region, applicants are required to live in Ohio or attend an Ohio college or university. Students from more than 50 colleges and universities have taken part.

Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine holds a separate informational session for Chester Scholars that includes a meeting with the dean of admissions. Each year, three or four students from the program are accepted at the medical school.

"We were always hopeful that it would be a tremendous success," Moore says. "The program has exceeded our expectations."

Of the more than 420 alumni who have completed the Chester Summer Scholars program since 1981, five are current MetroHealth physicians:

Mary Corrigan, MD
Family Practice

Sara Gradisar, MD
Obstetrics

Steven Houser, MD
Otolaryngology (ENT)

Aleksandr Rovner, MD
Internal Medicine &
Cardiology

Lance Wilson, MD

Zubizarreta House Complete; First Guests Expected This Summer

Nearly 60 people received a sneak peek at the interior of the newly constructed MetroHealth Zubizarreta House during a reception on March 23, 2017. The gathering gave attendees a chance to take a tour of the 7,000-square-foot house on Broadview Road next to the MetroHealth Old Brooklyn Health Center (OBC). The event also provided the opportunity for MetroHealth to celebrate the generosity of Miguel and Denise Zubizarreta of Bay Village and their family, who made the Zubizarreta House a reality with several gifts totaling more than $1.5 million.

Earlier this month, the fully accessible facility was given final occupancy approval. People with spinal cord injuries who travel to MetroHealth for research-related treatment and evaluation now have a comfortable home away from home. OBC is the site of ongoing research on the use of functional electrical stimulation (FES) to give disabled people increased independence and improved quality of life.

"I'm excited to use the facility," says Maria Sutter of Medina, who sustained a spinal cord injury in 2004. She has been involved in research at the FES Center for the past decade.

Sutter says she's impressed at how quickly the Zubizarreta House was realized, and how it fulfills every basic need, and beyond, for its guests.

"Potentially, I have an opportunity to have another FES procedure and stay at the house," she says. "Even though I only live 35 minutes away, staying at the house really makes the long days of testing and programming that go along with the implant surgeries less grueling."

Please contact Lynn Effron at 216-778-1548 or leffron@metrohealth.org if you are interested in making a gift toward Functional Electrical Stimulation research at MetroHealth.

MetroHealth Employees Create Resiliency Run to Help, Honor Patients

The idea of hosting a 5K run as a fundraiser for the John A. Gannon Trauma Center and the Comprehensive Burn Care Center at MetroHealth had been swirling about for several years among nurses who work closely with critical care patients.

Nothing ever got off the ground until early 2016, when Cristina Aldridge, RN, Trauma Program Coordinator; Mary Barnes, RN, Nurse Manager for the Burn Care Center; and Theresa Hannu, RN, Associate Chief Nursing Officer, decided that it was time to move forward.

They waited until the successful opening of the Critical Care Pavilion expansion in July 2016 and the completion of the Republican National Convention later that month before setting out to create an event whose proceeds would go toward providing services to trauma, burn and critical care patients.

A core group of a couple dozen volunteers from throughout MetroHealth came together: nurses, physicians, MetroHealth police and employees from Volunteer Services, Trauma Recovery Services, Accounting, External Affairs and The MetroHealth Foundation. Some were relatively new to MetroHealth. Others were long-time employees. Aldridge and Barnes joined MetroHealth in 2010. Hannu has been with MetroHealth since 1997.

The inaugural Resiliency Run 5K Run and 1-Mile Walk was held on Sunday, June 11, 2017, raising money and honoring survivors and their families at the same time.

"People are on the trauma floor, in the ICU, in the Burn Center for a long time, sometimes for months," Barnes said. It's not uncommon for nurses and other staff to bring lunch to patients who want a break from hospital food. They provide food, magazines and many other extras despite the lack of a dedicated budget for those types of amenities.

And they wish they could do even more, including having ample materials available for community outreach and educational events designed to prevent serious injuries that land people in the hospital.

At the same time, the opportunity to highlight the MetroHealth campus, the neighborhood and the employees also was important.

Said Aldridge: "We wanted to show the community how strong of a family MetroHealth is."

MetroHealth's 2017 Annual Meeting

Did you miss the live stream of MetroHealth's fourth annual Stakeholders Meeting, held on June 9, 2017?

Go to metrohealth.org/annualmeeting to view video of the event and read the 2016 Annual Report. This year's theme: "From Promise to Progress: MetroHealth's Groundbreaking Commitment to the Community."

Be Our Partner in the Transformation

MetroHealth has set a philanthropic goal to raise a minimum of $100 million in private contributions for the campus transformation project. In fact, it was MetroHealth's promise and ability to secure philanthropic funding for the project that was a key condition for securing the public financing in hospital revenue bonds. We will not be able to meet this ambitious goal without friends like you.

The MetroHealth campus transformation includes anchoring revitalization activity on West 25th Street, the building of a hospital with 270 private rooms, a new central utility plant, new parking garage and several other essential projects.

Construction on the new hospital - scheduled to open in Summer 2022 - is more than a year away. But we don't want to wait until then to begin sharing exciting details with you.

In early fall, we will launch a series of events that will update and engage you on our progress; to share the evolution of the hospital's designs, programs and services; and to keep you informed on the transformation's role in the overall revitalization of the West 25th Street Corridor and larger community and how you can partner with us to make our vision a reality.

We look forward to sharing updates and more details with you in the next newsletter.
